

This list only names and terms mentioned in Osho's discourse books & Darshan Diaries

Pronunciation: Ā ā = long 'a' like 'ah' but not quite 'ar' (spelling alternative 'aa') / ê = ai / é = ay / Ī, ī = spelling alternative 'ee' / Ū ū = spelling alternative 'oo'e.g. Ānanda can be spelled as Aananda. N.B. Anand = Joyless. Ānanda (Aananda) = with joy = Bliss

Not all Sanskrit, or other languages, pronunciations are always defined here e.g. no difference is given between sh and zh. The Anusvara letter n is given as m and n, e.g. Samsara and Sansara. For correct pronunciation see Sanskrit dictionaries.

There is no 'f' sound in Sanskrit, and 'ph' is pronounced as 'p-h' as in 'uphill'

Note 1: "Add Veet or Mukta" = Recommendation to combine with 1st Name "Veet" to mean "Beyond" or "Transcendence of"; or add 1st Name "Mukta" to mean "Freedom from."Note 2: Neutral names can end in an 'o', however in traditional Sanskrit the 'o' joins two words together as a compound name e.g. SāmudropremNote 3: In Sanskrit most male names end with an 'a', however in Hindi the same name can be pronounced (and written) without the 'a' and end in the consonant. Thus for male names the final 'a' is optional.Note 4: The difference of Sanskrit and Hindi: Sanskrit 'v' is often pronounced in Hindi as a 'w,' e.g. Svabhava or Swabhav. Also sometimes a "V" is also pronounced as a 'B' e.g. Vanshi or Banshi.Note 5: In Sanskrit most (but not all) female names with end with the long ā (aa). The long 't' (ee) is also a common feminine ending.
